Risking It All - Philippians 2:19-30

Ann Judson - 1789-1826

"I endeavored to commit myself entirely to God to be disposed of according to his pleasure. I do feel that his service is my delight. Oh that I might be the means of converting a single soul, it would be worth spending all my days to accomplish."

Ann Judson - 1789-1826

“Our baby boy had so completely entwined himself around his parents’ hearts, that his existence seemed necessary to their own. But God has taught us by afflictions what we would not learn by mercies—that our hearts are his exclusive property, and whatever rival intrudes, he will tear it away...”

Ann Judson - 1789-1826

“But what shall I say about the improvement we are to make of this heavy affliction? We do not feel a disposition to murmur, or to enquire of our Sovereign why he has done this. We wish, rather, to sit down submissively under the rod and bear the smart, till the end for which the affliction was sent shall be accomplished.”
